

7 PALM GAMES THAT KIDS LOVE

[From From Henry Kong at Henry Kongs website] I dont know why, but every time I whipped out my Palm, children seems to be attracted to it and wants to play with it. As such, I have a category especially dedicated to kids and is always on the lookout for programs that kids will enjoy. Here are some of 'em:

1. Kid's Paint by Beiks is best described as a paint-by-number (using the pour feature). It comes with 100 ready-made outlines - more than enough to keep any kid occupied for hours. The interface is simple and it is easy to sketch on to these custom-made outlines, reload or save them in bmp with the desktop utility.
2. MatchWho by Gae Gab Hong is a freeware that is a lot of fun. Kids enjoy making a face out of the many options (eg eyebrow, eye, nose) and then saving it for future reference, much like a police artist's tool.
3. Bunny is a trick card game. Pick a card, any card. Unknown to the victim, a new set of cards is reproduced the second time! No wonder the card you picked is never with the pack.
4. Crack me up is a new animated cartoon by Thuliumware. Touch any of the four colourful characters and they will chuckle so much that they really crack you up. Never fail to bring up a smile!
5. Kids love to pick on any adults, especially with a Tic Taqc Toe challenge. RB TTT by Burmeister Counsulting is a straightforward game that looks good and plays well.
6. Guess Who is another freeware by Gae Gab Hong. You have to guess which of the 25 objects that your Palm has in mind with the clues given. It is hard to guess who under 3 guesses - you have got to be very lucky.
7. There are many memory or matching games available for the Palm. Kids love these. My favorite is the freeware Memory that comes with several sets of graphics including Disney characters.
